

Canon Grotesque

Canon Grotesque is a playful type family distinguished by its round-sided sans-serif design with slightly closed terminals reminiscent of the grotesques from the early 20th century.

Its compressed form and tight spacing make Canon Grotesque ideal for use in posters, billboards, headers, and logos. The type family also includes wide alternates for round-shaped characters, introducing a dynamic change in tempo within compositions and creating a fresh reading experience.

Here for the nosedive
Whatever you need
And I'm savin' all the bold lines
I'll say 'em while you sleep
You're sleepin' on the wrong side
And I'm turnin' endlessly

The scene is set for dreaming
 Love's knocking at the door
 But oh my heart, I'm reluctant to start
 For we've been fooled before
 The night is like a lovely tune
 Beware, my foolish heart

In 1823, when he was 10, Verdi's parents arranged for the boy to attend school in Busseto, enrolling him in a Ginnasio—an upper school for boys—run by Don Pietro Selletti, while they continued to run their inn at Le Roncole. Verdi returned to Busseto regularly to play the organ on Sundays, covering the distance of several kilometres on foot. At age 11, Verdi received schooling in Italian, Latin, the humanities, and rhetoric. By the time he was 12, be-

The first Giovanna was Erminia Frezzolini, who had previously appeared in Verdi's I Lombardi alla prima crociata two years earlier. She was paired with her husband, tenor Antonio Poggi, as Charles, King of France. Baritone Filippo Colini portrayed Giovanna's father Giacomo. Verdi himself thought highly of the opera but was unhappy with

By the middle of the 19th century, the story of Joan of Arc had served as the basis for many operas, including those of Nicola Vaccai (1827) and Giovanni Pacini (1830), both of which were strongly reminiscent of Schiller's play. Solera was asked by Verdi's publisher, Giovanni Ri-
